Just a quick reminder that the three of you will be our reading panel tomorrow. I've posted the reading panels for the rest of the semester to the website, but wasn't sure if you had seen the listings yet.

After I give an introductory overview of statutory interpretation approaches, we'll focus on the Holy Trinity Church decision and how the Supreme Court reached an interpretation that admittedly conflicted with the text of the statute. Be prepared to contrast the holding in Holy Trinity Church with the outcome in the Caminetti case discussed briefly on p. 490. We'll also discuss the differences between using legislative intent vs. legislative purpose to interpret statutes.

I'll be in my office early if you want to talk briefly before class. Otherwise, see you tomorrow morning –
